Emergency workers will be able to get their cars repaired – and you can call out a plumber or an electrician

The new regulations will recognise the need that some essential workers may have cars that break down, Dlamini-Zuma said, so "those professionals" who would deal with cars can return to work.

The same holds true if householders have a burst pipe or an electricity problem, she said.

Specifically included in the list of artisans allowed to do emergency repair work:

locksmiths

glaziers

roof repairers

plumbers

electricians
